

The Mountaineer

Two a.m. alpine ascent.
Stars pulse as I shake snow-crystals
from my hair.

It is still,
silent,
except for the sound
of snow cracking,
ice-axes cutting,
and the soft
imagined pressure
of a snow leopard
leaving tracks.

I climb high
leaving a pawprint
in the night-dark snow.

Co-winner of the Anthropology and Humanism Poetry Prize, November 1996 and also published in Anthropology and Humanism, Volume 22, Number 1, Arlington, VA, June 1997